SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 11.

THE "ISMS" which are every now and then imported into the South, and sought to be cultivated there, fall upon stony ground, and never flourish. They do not seem to find congenial soil. This "woman's suffrage" ism is an illustration. What progress has it made in any of the Southern States? None whatever. It is rejected and despised by the females themselves, more even than it is by the men. We suppose there tee, or some of the late candidates who will are not twenty ladies, in Virginia, beyond the pay for their services and help them back to the few who imbibed the ism abroad, and brought it here with them, who would, if they had a they ask for any of these parties there are met voice in the matter, yote for it-and the ladies, by the reply, "Dont live here now, anymore; generally, who were born at the North, and died last Tuesday." now live here, are just as much opposed to it, as the others. This is but an instance. There are numerous other of these isms, which grow up like mushrooms, and last for a few months or years, but hardly show themselves across the Potomac. We need not enumerate them-because where they spring up they are finally rejected by the intelligence of the communities where they show themselvescoming as shadows, they so depart. But, it is a note worthy fact, that none of them originate here, and hardly any of them find supporters or defenders enough to make a contest, or to induce even controversy.

A letter from Richmond in the Baltimore Sun says that accounts from several portions of Virginia represent that a larger number of colored people voted the Conservative ticket this year, than at any previous election. When the colored people learn wisdom and do not suffer themselves to be hoodwinked and blinded and recommends that, "before sending another and driven by their leaders, there will be more bond abroad, to be hawked from banking house ter, we are not informed as to how much was of them who will vote with the conservatives. to banking-house throughout Europe, he will realized by the holders of policies. The letter to which we refer says :-- "We gave just try to fund the bulk of the debt at home. you your freedom," said a radical to a conservative colored man, vesterday. "Yes, sir," replied the man, "and you gim lots of us hard work, poor pay and short rations."

It is reported that the Administration are much disappointed at the result of the Virginia | faulter in a considerable amount. election, espescially as they had been assured by the Radical leaders of a triumph! It is, also, said, there is a probability of the removal of many of the present office holders, and the appointment of others who will be more active in electioneering, and more "pronounced" in politics. Some think more colored people will be appointed to office, in order to secure the "allegiance" of that class of voters-who are getting tired and restive of being used for the | Manchester and Potomac Railroad Company

It was expected in Washington, yesterday, that the District Supreme Court would, to-day, render a decision adverse to the females who have entered suit to enforce their claims to vote in Washington. The court bottom their decision on the organia act creating the new district government, which expressly restricts suffrage to males. The court, it is also thought, will dissolve the injunction of a lower court against the four million loan bill passed by the new Legislative Assembly to carry on local improve-

THE FIRST COLORED JURY IN PITTSYLVA-NIA COUNTY .- The Chatham Tribune of 8th inst., says:-"The people of this county had an opportunity last Monday to witness a novel sight in court. Judge Tredway had previously directed the sheriff to summon a colored venire child of his wife by a former husband. Of course this new sight attracted a considerable crowd of both colors to witness the result of the experiment. The sheriff, as directed, summoned the most intelligent looking in the county and by consent of counsel the first twelve were sworn to try the case. It was somewhat remarkable that not one of the jury had ever heard of the case before, notwithstanding the killing was done last December, and some of the jury lived within ten miles of the place at which it was committed. The evidence was brief but very strong; the case was fully argued and the jury were not absent after retiring, longer than fifteen minutes. > HESSIAN FLY AND JOINT WORM IN WHEAT. -I heard during the late fair that the wheat in several sections of the State was infested with fly. Though aware that by many persons an agricultural fact, when published, becomes transmuted-by the mere process of printing, I suppose, —into an untruth, or at best a fanci-ful conjecture, I will venture to advise a remedy, which I have tried satisfactorily. It was first suggested to me by the late J. Addison Cochran, of Lock Willow, Augusta county, as a remedy-in his hand a perfectly successful one-against joint worm; and was, on the and approved for the same purpose by the late Captain Bootten, of Madison county, a very sensible and judicious gentleman.

At a later period, I found that it had been recommended, from his own practice, by the late—not the present—Wm. M. Tate, of Au gusta, who had communicated it to the Farmer's Register in I think, its fifth volume. What prescribe, under the above sanction, is two bushels of air-slacked or water-slacked lime per acre, sown broadcast, on a still morning or

In my own case, I affirm, that the land limed with 21 bushels of lime per acre in the latter part of November-the wheat sowed 23d September, 1856-was cured of a very bad attack of the fly which beset it that fall; that the fly pilot laws: came back in the spring in greater and undi minished numbers, and was discovered too late to make the application of lime again; and that the wheat made more apparently than the average of the whole field of which it was a part: which field made 15/30 60ths bushels per aere; land which at that time was newly taken up for improvement, and exempt from fly except as to twelve acres.

The application of one bushel per acre will do, though two are better, for the sake of proper distribution. It should be repeated in the spring if the fly reappears; and it will be safer has received from the Emperor William of Ger- for insurance, as the labor was slight, and the 153, 155, 157 and 160 for common to prime, and Since the war I have had no fly, and have not made the application.

The seeding, though the hand alone will do very well, is best done with tea scoops, as they are called by the grocers, being of the shape of "sugar scoops," hold a double handful. With this implement a man with his whole face and nostrils and hands well greased and kept so, and sowing with the wind, can sow with but little inconvenience, two bushels of lime per acre.

The modus operandi, (or theory, for those that will have it), is that the dew forms with the lime a lye, which, running down the blade to the stalk, destroys the fly which is thereto attached.

Be this as it may, the remedy has been proved to be a successful one. FRANK G. RUFFIN.

COURTSHIP, MARRIAGE, DESERTION.-It appears that several months ago a man who called himself Col. G. Fred. Potter held a position as book-keeper in one of the bureaus of Devereux, Boston, to master. the Treasury Department in which there are a number of ladies employed. He was not very old, and had a certain military air and manner which seemed to compensate for his want of good looks and make him quite a favorite with his lady fellow-clerks. He flirted promiseuous ly for a while, but finally settled on one as the centre of his attentions, and became in the eyes of the rest her accepted beau.

The lady thus honored was young and prepossessing, possessed of a home with all its attractions, but with ability enough to earn her own living, and independence enough to do it hence her position in the Department.

The colonel and his lady-love were getting along nicely. The match was talked of through the division, both parties congratulated on their approaching marriage, and all seemed bright and happy at the prospect. But a change little thought of was soon to "come o'er the spirit of their dreams." and it came in this wise: About a month ago a lady called at the office door and inquired for Colonel P. Promptly responding to the call, the gentleman walked to the entry, and there met a lady who claimed to be and was his wife. [He married a lady of Alexandria in May. 1860, and she is still living.] This fact was discovered at the time by some one who knew of the relations existing between him and the Treasury young lady. and a message was immediately sent up stairs informing her of the fact that the Col. already had a wife, and the amazement and consternation which followed can better be imagined than described. The sympathy of the ladies was tendered, and the man voted a brute.

Appearances were certainly against him, and it seemed that the would-be-lover was to be overwhelmed with the popular indignation which the discovery occasioned, but he was equal to the emergency, and explained that the woman who called had once been his wife, but was now divorced. Love is blind; the explanation satisfied the only one he seemed to care for, and again quiet reigned in the company. The lady most interested believed him; why should not the others? This was the state of af fairs for a few weeks, and then the gallant ex-offi cer suddenly secured a month's leave and depart ed from the city. There was nothing particular in this, but a few days after the young lady also secured a leave, and departed, none knew whither at the time, but it his since been discovered that they fled together to New York.

In that city it is stated they were married and lived together a short time, when she became sick and was deserted by the wretch who had lured her to her ruin, and left her away from home, without money or friends. The landlady took pity on her forlorn condition, and her to her friends, where she arrived about three weeks ago, and after a short illness, as much mental as physical, breathed her last. As soon as the facts of the case became

MRS. JOAQUIN MILLER has supplemented the volume of poems lately published by her husband by a letter in which she severely censures the gushing poet for the homely vices of neglecting and abandoning his wife and children. The fond wife begs the public "to welcome her husband as a man of genius," with the same sort of devotion, that would have inspired a letter from Mrs. Harold Skimpole. But our American public-at least that part of it that is most addicted to poetry -has a prosaic regard for the manly virtues; and this exining the returns of the election, found them posure, which harmonizes so closely with the general moral tone of Mr. Miller's gorgeous 'brown' poetry, will lead thousands of honest people to read Miller's glowing pictures of masculine meanness, selfishness, and cowardice, with which his personal heroes are nearly
